to complete the picture. I also realized that the operations are largely dependent on how well the workforce is managed, how resources are optimized and how plans are devised. As a strong-willed person, I know one thing for sure that if given the right opportunity, I am capable of making a far-reaching effect not just on an organization but on the society as a whole.

Why Graduate Diploma in Networking

A network engineer is someone who is responsible for a company for all the equipment that makes up the network. The network is what connects all the PC's and servers together, internet access, links to remote sites, wireless, ADSL links etc. and for working in this sector any great company requires Bachelors Telecommunication and a specialised course in Networking and what better if I do this 1 year course from abroad and in New Zealand where I shall gain practical knowledge as well as theoretical knowledge too.
